Health & Human Services

The Bachelor of Arts in Human Services (BAHS) offered through Tyndale's Department of Health & Human Services is a program offered in partnership with Seneca College. The BAHS allows students to complete a Bachelor of Arts degree at Tyndale, plus a diploma in either Early Childhood Education or Social Service Work at Seneca, all in four years of full-time study. Students study at Tyndale for the first two years and then complete a 10-month program at Seneca before returning to Tyndale for their final year. Students graduate with both a university degree and a diploma and are ready for a career in their area of interest.

BA HUMAN SERVICES – MODULAR PROGRAM (120 credit hours)

The Bachelor of Arts Human Service (BAHS) Modular program is designed to offer an interdisciplinary degree to prepare graduates to meet the leadership demands of a rapidly changing service sector. Students complete a core of liberal arts courses and core courses in psychology, sociology, and Biblical Studies and Theology.

This Human Services BA degree prepares students for fulfilling careers working with people who need additional support to function successfully in their communities. A graduate with this degree may find employment in family and community daycare facilities, youth programs, group homes and residential settings, or special needs programs and care agencies. This major is excellent preparation for graduate studies and also for commencing the Bachelor of Education.

Full-time undergraduate education is made possible for adults (25 years of age or older) because of its unique design. Each modular course consists of one four-hour evening class per week for five weeks, supplemented by 14-18 hours of guided independent study per week. This format provides essentially the same time involvement as a traditional schedule.

The program's goal is to integrate Christian faith, learning, living, and career preparation in a meaningful and practical way.

Psychology

The Bachelor of Arts in Psychology involves the scientific study of human behaviour and exposes students to the major theories and theorists in the discipline. The major in Psychology prepares the student for a wide variety of professions, for professional schools where a general liberal arts background is desirable, and for graduate studies in Psychology. The Department of Psychology at Tyndale emphasizes clinical, social, and developmental psychology. A BA Honours degree in Psychology is also offered. To enroll in the BA Honours Psychology track during the fourth year requires completion of PSYC 360 and 461 during the third year and the arrangement of a thesis supervisor by April 1 of the third year.
